Slow Reading

Depending on our aim, there are various ways in which we can read books or articles. One method is known as “skimming.” We use this method if we want to find only the main ideas in a piece of writing. When we skim an article, we look through it quickly without paying attention to the (26). If we want to find some particular piece of information but are not interested in the overall meaning, then we can let our eyes pass over the text until we find the part we want. This is called “scanning.” However, if we want to understand fully what the author is saying, then we need to read the words slowly and carefully. This is known as “in-depth” reading, and according to a number of studies, it is becoming increasingly uncommon today.

Many people blame the Internet for the decline in in-depth reading. Nicholas Carr, a well-known writer on technology, argues that there are three features of the Internet that (27) in-depth reading. The first is the fact that people often use links to jump from one website to another on the Internet. The second is that people often interrupt their reading to check their e-mail or the news. The third feature is that much of what we read on the Internet is very short anyway. The result is that it has become (28) for people to concentrate on longer pieces of writing.

A number of writers and scholars have become so concerned about this situation that they are arguing we need to start a “slow reading” movement. This idea is based on the “slow food” movement, in which people take time to prepare and eat food together. None of the supporters of “slow reading” think we can (29) the Internet completely. Instead, they recommend that we turn off the computer once or twice a week, settle down with a book, and read with concentration for a few hours.

Hidden Treasures

Over time, many ships have sunk to the bottom of the ocean. Some of these sank because of bad weather, and others because they were attacked by enemies. The remains of these ships are known as shipwrecks, and the United Nations has estimated that there may be as many as 3 million of them around the world. Many shipwrecks are (30). Sometimes there is gold and other kinds of treasure inside them. But even when what they contain is less precious, they can still provide important information about how people lived in the past.

Recently, there have been many arguments about how shipwrecks should be treated. One reason is that new technology is making it much easier to (31) them. Underwater robots, in particular, are allowing people to search in deeper parts of the ocean than ever before. Now, a number of commercial companies are using such technology to find more and more shipwrecks. Under international law, these companies can keep what they find on the sunken ships except when the ships are ones that were owned by a government.

Many historians, however, are opposed to such (32) searches. They say that shipwrecks should not be disturbed by treasure hunters but protected by governments so that scholars can study them just as they are. This is partly because treasure hunters sometimes damage objects they find. But it is also because many objects are preserved better by being underwater. (33), commercial companies argue that modern fishing techniques and pollution mean that many shipwrecks are at risk underwater. They say they are actually helping historians by finding shipwrecks and saving the objects in them from damage. Nevertheless, in 2001, the United Nations introduced an international agreement stating that all shipwrecks should be left in the oceans. By 2010, over 30 countries had signed the agreement.

 Subject: Apartment in Stanley Court

Dear Ms. Cooper,
 Thank you for taking me to see the three apartments in Fairview yesterday. I have decided to take the one in Stanley Court. It is close to my office, and the rent of $800 a month seems reasonable. You said that I could move in anytime because the apartment is empty. I can stay in my current apartment until November 30, so that would be the best date for me.
 I have a question about the air conditioner. When you turned it on yesterday, I noticed that it was quite noisy. You said that the owner installed it 15 years ago. Could you ask him to replace it before I move in? I could contribute some of the cost. A newer model of air conditioner would be quieter and more energy efficient. Since the owner is going to pay for the cost of the electricity, we would both benefit. Please let me know when you would like me to come to your agency to sign the contract and give you the money for the deposit. You said I could either pay the rent in cash or transfer the money to your agency's bank account every month. The latter would be better for me. Please give me the account information.
 Yours sincerely,
 Andrew Davies

- (34) Andrew Davies says that he
- 1 wants Ms. Cooper to take him to see another apartment.
 - 2 thinks the rent for the apartment in Stanley Court is too high.
 - 3 needs to move soon because his current apartment is too small.
 - 4 would like to move out of his apartment on November 30.
- (35) What does Andrew Davies offer to do?
- 1 Pay part of the cost of a new air conditioner.
 - 2 Contribute some money to the electricity bill.
 - 3 Stop using the air conditioner if it is too noisy.
 - 4 Bring an air conditioner from his old apartment.
- (36) What does Andrew Davies say that he would prefer to do?
- 1 Read the contract before he goes to the agency.
 - 2 Take cash to Ms. Cooper's agency to pay the rent.
 - 3 Transfer the money for his rent to the agency's bank account.
 - 4 See the apartment again before signing the contract.

Lessons from the Ozone Hole

In May 1985, scientists from the British Antarctic Survey shocked the world by announcing the discovery of a huge hole in the ozone layer above the Antarctic. Ozone is a gas usually formed from oxygen that is high in the earth's atmosphere. The ozone layer is essential to life on our planet because it protects us from harmful ultraviolet rays produced by the sun. Without the ozone layer, these rays would cause cancer and other diseases in both human beings and animals.

The world's reaction to the scientists' discovery was surprisingly quick. Data showed that the ozone hole had been created by gases called chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs), which were widely used in machines such as air conditioners and refrigerators. By 1988, 46 governments had signed the Montreal Protocol, a treaty that banned the use of these gases. Eventually, this treaty was signed by every member country of the United Nations—the only treaty ever to be signed by so many nations. It will be a long time before the ozone hole disappears completely, but it soon stopped growing. Persuading the international community to adopt the Montreal Protocol was considered to be a great achievement for the environmental movement.

According to scientists, there were two reasons why people responded so quickly to the danger. The first was that it was easy to understand. If the hole kept growing, it would threaten life everywhere. The second reason was that it was easy to replace the CFCs with hydrochlorofluorocarbons (HCFCs), gases that do much less damage to the ozone layer. Unfortunately, though, HCFCs have their own problems. Not only do they contribute to global warming, but they may also be a major factor in the development of acid rain.

Does this mean that the ban on CFCs was a bad idea? The ozone hole was a real danger and, without the ban, it would have quickly grown to cover the whole planet. Stopping its growth was a major victory. Nevertheless, the difficulties caused by HCFCs show how complicated environmental problems can be. Above all, they demonstrate how important it is for us to find a way to control the main cause of global warming—the harmful gases that we keep putting into the atmosphere.

(37) The ozone layer is important because it

- 1 helps preserve the oxygen necessary for life.
 - 2 protects us from rays that can cause serious diseases.
 - 3 allows us to calculate the amount of pollution in the air.
 - 4 stops the earth's atmosphere from being damaged by the sun.

(38) Why was the Montreal Protocol seen as a great success for the environmental movement?

- 1 It forced governments to do more research on the ozone layer.
 - 2 It provided data showing that CFCs created the ozone hole.
 - 3 It attracted attention to the damage being done to nature.
 - 4 It was agreed to by more countries than any other treaty.

(39) What was one reason CFCs could be banned so quickly?

- 1 Scientists were becoming concerned about acid rain.
 - 2 People recognized that global warming was a real problem.
 - 3 A gas that was not as harmful to the ozone layer was available.
 - 4 They were being produced in only a few places around the world.

(40) The ban on CFCs was a good idea because

- 1 it led to a reduction in global warming.
- 2 it saved the planet from a serious threat.
- 3 it reduced the amount of HCFCs in the air.
- 4 it showed how complicated nature is.

Natural Solutions

Malaria is a serious disease that affects millions of people every year. Malaria is spread by female mosquitoes, and one obvious way to fight it is to reduce the number of mosquitoes. This can be done very effectively by using chemicals that kill them. In fact, since the 1950s, this method has resulted in a large reduction in the number of malaria cases. The chemicals used to kill mosquitoes, however, have various disadvantages. Not only are they expensive, but they are often bad for the environment. Moreover, over time, mosquitoes gradually stop being affected by them.

For these reasons, scientists have recently been looking at alternative methods of controlling mosquitoes. One of these is using fish. Mosquitoes lay their eggs in water, and the eggs then turn into tiny worms that live in the water for one or two weeks. Some kinds of fish eat these worms, so introducing these fish into lakes and ponds can lead to fewer mosquitoes. Projects carried out in India have found that, depending on the kind of fish, this method can reduce the number of mosquitoes by over 90 percent.

Using fish to control mosquitoes has many advantages. One of these is that it does no damage to the environment. Another is that the fish reproduce by themselves, making this a very cheap method of fighting malaria. In addition, some of these fish can be caught and sold, meaning that local people can actually earn an income from them. All of these factors are especially important in the developing countries where malaria is still common.

Using nature to control nature in this way is known as “biocontrol.” Biocontrol itself is not a new idea, but scientists are now doing more research on it. One problem with using fish has been that it must be limited to permanent bodies of water, such as lakes. Mosquitoes, though, often lay their eggs in pools of rainwater that later dry up. Scientists have now found a kind of fish in the African country of Tanzania that can survive even when these pools are dry. When the rain comes, the fish eat the mosquitoes. Many experts believe that this kind of research is giving biocontrol a bright future as a way to fight diseases.

(41) How has the number of malaria cases been reduced since the 1950s?

- 1 By treating people with new medicines.
- 2 By destroying the places where mosquitoes live.
- 3 By getting rid of mosquitoes with chemicals.
- 4 By stopping mosquitoes from laying eggs.

(42) Why are scientists introducing certain fish into lakes and ponds?

- 1 They eat the worms that turn into mosquitoes.
- 2 They produce eggs that help to kill the mosquitoes.
- 3 They reduce the number of worms that mosquitoes eat.
- 4 They make it easier to see where mosquitoes are hiding.

(43) What is one advantage of using fish to fight malaria?

- 1 They remove chemicals that pollute the water.
- 2 They can be used by farmers to grow more crops.
- 3 They are not affected by the disease themselves.
- 4 They can help local people to make money.

(44) Why are the Tanzanian fish especially good for biocontrol?

- 1 They can survive without a permanent body of water.
- 2 They are already known to most people around the world.
- 3 They cost less to transport than other kinds of fish.
- 4 They live longer in lakes than most other kinds of fish.

(45) Why do many experts think that biocontrol has a bright future?

- 1 Research is explaining more clearly the causes of diseases.
- 2 The number of fish has increased in African lakes and ponds.
- 3 Scientists are finding new ways to use nature to control diseases.
- 4 Natural chemicals are often more effective than man-made ones.
