Subject: Thank you

Dear Michelle,
How are you doing? It's snowing hard here, and it's really cold. Thank you very much for the beautiful scarf* you sent me. I got it yesterday. It's my favorite color. You said you knitted* it by yourself. How long did it take you to make it? You did a great job.
Love,
Grandma

From: Michelle Smith
To: Jane Smith
Date: January 8, 2008 21:08
Subject: I'm glad

Dear Grandma,
I'm glad you like it! It took me three weeks to make it. I really enjoyed knitting with you when you visited us last summer. After that, I decided to learn more about knitting. Mom bought me a book about it, and I started practicing for an hour every day. I often knit while I listen to my favorite music. I made a hat for Mom, but she couldn't use it. It was too small, so I gave it to a friend from school. I want to make a bigger one for Mom now. My book doesn't have any information on making hats, so I am using the Internet to find information. Anyway, it's very cold this winter, so please stay warm!
Love,
Michelle

Subject: Making hats

Dear Michelle,

I wore your scarf when I went to lunch with my friends today. They all said it looked nice. It's difficult to make hats, but keep trying! The next time I visit you, I will give you some more lessons. This morning, I sent you a magazine about knitting. It has some information on hats. If you have any questions, please ask me.

Love,
Grandma

Kudzu* in America

Kudzu is the name of a plant. It is native* to Japan and China. Now it also grows in many places in the United States.

It was first brought to the U.S. in 1876. In that year, the American government* held a celebration for the United States' 100th birthday. Countries from around the world were asked to join the celebration. The Japanese government made a beautiful garden with kudzu and other plants from Japan. Many Americans visited the garden. They especially liked kudzu because they thought the flowers were pretty and smelled sweet. After that, many Americans planted it in their own gardens.

In the 1920s, Charles and Lillie Pleas found that animals liked to eat kudzu, and they began selling it to farmers. In the 1930s, many people also said kudzu was good for the soil,* so the American government asked farmers to plant it. The weather in the southern part of the U.S. was perfect for kudzu, and it grew much faster there than in China or Japan. But it grew too fast. Kudzu sometimes grew 30 centimeters in just one day and soon covered roads, bridges, and houses. Kudzu also killed forests because it grew over the trees.

In 1953, the American government stopped telling people to grow kudzu, but it already covered many areas. Some people think kudzu is useful and make baskets, paper, medicines, and food from it. But many towns and cities spend millions of dollars each year to kill kudzu and to keep it out of gardens and farms.
