The Browns' New Pet

Chris Brown and his sister Martha love animals, so they were very happy last Saturday when their parents said that they could have a pet. Over dinner, the family talked about what kind of animal to get. Chris said he wanted a dog because they are so friendly. But Martha said that she would (34) a cat. Her parents agreed with her. They said they were too busy to walk a dog.

The next morning, Mr. Brown found an advertisement in the local newspaper. It was from a woman who was giving away some kittens. After Mr. Brown spoke to the woman on the phone, he took Chris and Martha to look at the kittens. They quickly chose one that they thought looked cute. The woman said that the kitten was still weak because it was so young. She told Chris and Martha to be (35) when they played with it. The Browns thanked the woman and took their new pet home.

A Better Way to Relax

Going to the hospital for an operation is frightening for most adults, and it can be even more stressful for children. Research shows that children who suffer from stress in this way take a longer time to recover after an operation. Because of this, hospital staff members try to make the day of the operation as (36) as possible for children. They decorate waiting areas with colorful posters and play relaxing music. Doctors also sometimes give children drugs a few hours before an operation to make them feel calm. However, some doctors have recently been trying an unusual way to relax children before an operation — letting them play handheld video games.

In 2004, Dr. Anuradha Patel from The University Hospital, in New Jersey, tried to find out how well this method worked. She decided to do her research after watching a boy playing a video game at a restaurant. He was so interested in the game that he did not seem to notice what was happening around him. Dr. Patel thought that the (37) thing might be true for children who played video games before an operation.

To test her idea, Dr. Patel studied three groups of children. Children in the first group were given a drug to relax them before their operation. Those in the second group played a video game instead of receiving the drug. Those in the third group neither took a drug nor played a game. When Dr. Patel and her team of researchers measured the stress levels of the children, they found that the second group had the lowest levels. As a result, Dr. Patel felt sure that having children play video games was the best way to stop them from (38) about an operation.

From: Peter Newcombe <newcombe337@worldstepmail.com>
To: Jessica Bradley <jessica88@milltowncollege.edu>
Date: January 25, 2008
Subject: Re: Some advice, please

Hi Jessica,

Thanks for your e-mail. I always enjoy hearing from you about how you're doing at college. It sounds like you're busy, so it's kind of you to write so often. It's great that you're learning to play chess. Why don't we play sometime?

You also said in your e-mail that you were thinking about buying a used car. You're right that it will be useful to have a car for shopping and going on trips with your friends. But have you thought about this carefully, Jessica? Owning a car can be expensive. Although you'll probably be able to buy a used car cheaply, you will still have to pay for gas and repairs.

However, if you're sure that you want one, I'd be happy to help. Once you have found a few cars that you're interested in, I can go with you to look at them. There are many things that can go wrong with an old car, and you need to know what kind of problems to check for. As you know, I spent a lot of time working on car engines when I was younger, so I can probably give you some good advice.

Uncle Peter

(39) In her last e-mail, Jessica said that she

- 1 had started to play chess.
- 2 was too busy to write to her family.
- 3 wanted Uncle Peter to teach her chess.
- 4 would not spend the next vacation with her family.

(40) Uncle Peter tells Jessica that

- 1 it will be difficult to find a place that sells cars near her college.
- 2 he would like her to take him on a trip after she buys a car.
- 3 she should learn how to repair cars before she buys one.
- 4 having a car might be more expensive than she thinks.

(41) What does Uncle Peter offer to do for Jessica?

- 1 Give her enough money to buy a car.
- 2 Go with her to look at used cars.
- 3 Repair her car if it breaks down.
- 4 Let her use his car until she gets her own.

A Home Away from Home

Taking your family on an overseas vacation can be very expensive. In addition to air tickets, you usually have to pay for hotel rooms, restaurant meals, and local transportation. One way to save money on an overseas vacation is to do a home exchange. On a home exchange, you go on a vacation and stay in another family's home while they stay in yours. Both families get a place to stay for free, and they often use each other's cars and look after each other's pets. Over the last 20 years, home-exchange vacations have become more and more popular, and now about 60,000 families take one every year.

Most of these vacations are arranged through home-exchange websites like ExchangeHomes.com. This site has information from thousands of people who want to do home exchanges. After paying a small amount of money to join, new members can describe their homes and say where they want to go on vacation. They can also contact other members on the site.

Some people are afraid that their things might be stolen or broken if they let strangers stay in their home. However, Anne Pottinger, the owner of ExchangeHomes.com, believes that such problems are rare. She says that she has never had reports of home exchangers damaging things on purpose or stealing things. In any case, she adds, it is safer to have people stay in your home during a vacation than to leave it empty.

Naturally, many people want to stay in homes in places that are popular with tourists, such as Paris or New York. However, others are interested in a more unusual vacation experience. Sheila Shockey, for example, who lives in a small town in Kansas, in the United States, has been asked to exchange her home by people who live in Hawaii and Australia. These families enjoy experiencing everyday life in small, ordinary towns.

(42) What has become popular with some families?

- 1 Staying at hotels that are run by families.
- 2 Exchanging family members for a short time.
- 3 Sharing the cost of air tickets with other families.
- 4 Using another family's home during their vacation.

(43) What can families do by using ExchangeHomes.com?

- 1 Contact people who live in places they want to visit.
- 2 Find information about the best home-exchange websites.
- 3 Sell their homes to the people who will pay the most money.
- 4 Make money by having people stay in their homes.

(44) According to Anne Pottinger,

- 1 home exchangers can quickly find information about cities to visit.
- 2 families can keep their homes safer by doing a home exchange.
- 3 home exchangers sometimes steal things from others' homes.
- 4 most families who use her website send her reports.

(45) Sheila Shockey's experience shows that some people who do home exchanges

- 1 find jobs at local companies during their vacations.
- 2 think about moving to a new city after their vacation.
- 3 want to go to places that are not popular with tourists.
- 4 trade homes with people who did not advertise on a website.
