A Successful Vacation

After Ai graduated from high school, she went to London with some of her friends for two weeks. Ai's parents paid for the flight, but they told Ai that she would have to use her own money during the vacation. Before she left, she planned how much money she would (34) during her trip. Then she went to the bank and changed that amount into pounds.

During the first week in London, Ai spent more money than she had expected. She and her friends visited museums, ate in restaurants, and went to a concert. In the second week, she decided to be more careful with her money. She suggested to her friends that it would be (35) to buy food at supermarkets and eat it in their hotel room. By the end of her trip, Ai had enough money left to buy a present for her parents.

Sleeping at the Museum

Every month, millions of children in the United States go to museums with their families or on school trips. Although children can learn many things at museums, these visits are not always enjoyable. Famous museums in places like New York City and Washington, D.C., are often crowded with people. As a result, it can be difficult to spend enough time looking at the exhibits and reading the explanations. Also, some museums have few activities for young visitors. Because of this, children can sometimes become (36) there. But recently, many museums have found a new way to get more young visitors. They have been letting them stay overnight.

The American Museum of Natural History in New York City is one museum that has been offering “sleepovers.” These events are for children aged from 8 to 12 and their parents. The cost is $129 per person, which includes an evening snack and breakfast. But visitors must (37) their own sleeping bags from home. In the evening, the children take a tour of the dinosaur section. The lights of the museum are turned down, and the children are given flashlights to help them see the exhibits. At bedtime, they lay out their sleeping bags under a huge model of a blue whale.

Sleepovers at museums have become popular because they give children a very (38) experience. Few people have the chance to walk around a museum at night, when it is almost empty. Children who have stayed overnight at a museum say that it is very exciting. The museums hope that children who take part in the sleepovers will come back again and again.

From: Sophie Bateman <s-bateman@newstepmail.com>
To: Mark Sears <m-sears@marksearssales.com>
Date: June 13, 2008
Subject: Vacation-home visit

Dear Mark,

I'm glad that you and your family will be coming to stay at our vacation home next month. It's been such a long time since we last met. I don't think I've seen you since we were working together at Wakefield Corporation. Anyway, I can't wait to see you and your wife again, and my son Harry is looking forward to playing with your two boys.

The house has four bedrooms, so there will be plenty of space for both our families. You and your wife can share one room, and your boys can share another. There is also a kitchen, a large living room, a barbecue area, and a game room. We don't have a television or a computer, but there is a billiard table in the game room.

Don't forget your swimsuits, since the house is near Lake Mulligan, and we often go swimming. The weather is quite warm even in the evenings, so don't worry about being cold. It's nice to walk by the lake in the evening, but there are many mosquitoes and other insects. Make sure you pack some spray to keep them away. I'm looking forward to seeing you there.

Yours,
Sophie

(39) Sophie and Mark

The Jeepney

In 1945, at the end of World War II, many soldiers from the U.S. Army returned home from the Philippines. But they left behind hundreds of Jeeps that they had used. These Jeeps were sold or given away to local people. The public-transportation systems in Manila and other large cities had been almost completely destroyed during the war, so the new owners of these vehicles decided to use them as shared taxis.

Shared taxis are a popular type of transport in many countries around the world. In some ways, they are actually more like buses than taxis. For example, shared taxis often follow the same route every day. But they are more convenient than buses because passengers can get on or off anywhere along the route.

It was necessary to make several changes to the U.S. Army Jeeps before they could be used as shared taxis. The new owners made the Jeeps longer and put more seats in the back. Because the Jeeps had no roofs, the owners added them to protect passengers from the sun and the rain. Then, in order to attract passengers, the owners painted the sides of the Jeeps with bright colors and added flags, mirrors, and other decorations.

The result was a colorful vehicle that looked like a small bus and carried about 15 people. People in the Philippines called them “jeepneys.” These vehicles were very tough, so they could be driven on rough roads in the countryside. Because it was expensive to buy a new vehicle, jeepney owners were careful to keep them in good condition. In fact, some of the original jeepneys are still being used today. For many people in the Philippines, jeepneys are not only a convenient way of getting around but also a symbol of how the Philippines was able to recover from the war.

- (42) In Manila at the end of World War II,
- 1 there was very little public transportation.
 - 2 the U.S. Army destroyed their own Jeeps.
 - 3 local people sent their vehicles to America.
 - 4 American soldiers started driving shared taxis.
- (43) What is one advantage of shared taxis?
- 1 They go faster than most buses.
 - 2 They take people to other countries.
 - 3 Passengers can get off at any time.
 - 4 Passengers can change the routes.
- (44) The new owners of the Jeeps
- 1 removed seats from the back.
 - 2 added roofs to protect passengers.
 - 3 made them look like army vehicles.
 - 4 used them to sell flags and other decorations.
- (45) Which of the following statements is true?
- 1 The original jeepneys can no longer be seen.
 - 2 Owners of jeepneys took good care of their vehicles.
 - 3 People in the Philippines can ride jeepneys for free.
 - 4 Jeepneys are shorter than U.S. Army Jeeps.
