Camping in Style

There are many beautiful places in North America to go camping. Camping is popular because it is a great way to spend time surrounded by nature. However, some people (36) certain things about camping. For example, they would prefer not to have to put up a tent, cook for themselves, or sleep on the ground in a sleeping bag. But now, a small number of campgrounds are offering camping vacations where people do not need to do any of these things. This type of camping is sometimes called “glamorous camping” because it is a little like staying at a five-star hotel.

One campground that offers glamorous-camping vacations is The Resort at Paws Up in Montana in the United States. Here, guests sleep in large tents that have beds, rugs, and heaters. Near each tent, there is a private bathroom. Guests do not have to do any of the work that campers do on a (37) camping vacation. For example, a staff member builds a campfire, and an expert chef cooks each meal. There is also a maid to make the beds and clean up the tent.

Of course, glamorous camping is very expensive. At a campground on Vancouver Island in Canada, guests pay as much as $10,000 per week. Some people think that guests at these campgrounds do not (38) the real fun of camping. They say that doing things like cooking food over a fire is what makes camping enjoyable. However, glamorous camping may be a good choice for people who want to camp in comfort — and who do not mind paying for it.

From: Tina Harris <t-harris@steparoundmail.com>
To: Laura Williams <laura2341@holdenconnections.com>
Date: January 25, 2009
Subject: We're moving!

Dear Laura,

Thank you for inviting us to your house for lunch last Saturday. Your husband is such a good cook! We all loved his stew. Brian and the children really enjoyed playing soccer in your backyard in the afternoon.

Do you remember that we were planning to move out of our apartment and into a house? Well, we found a beautiful house on Sunday. It's in Parkville, so our two boys won't have to change to a new school. Also, the house has three bedrooms, so they won't have to share a bedroom anymore. We can move in at the end of February.

You said before that you would like to babysit for us sometime. I know it's a big favor, but could the boys spend the day at your house on the day we move? A moving company is going to take our things to the new house on February 28. Brian and I will be very busy that day. If you don't mind looking after the boys, I'd like to drop them off at 9 a.m. and pick them up at 6 p.m. to take them to the new house. Would that be OK?

Best wishes,

Tina

Potato Power

The United Nations (UN) made 2008 the International Year of the Potato. This may sound like a strange idea, but the UN had a serious aim. The aim was to tell people around the world about the good points of potatoes. The UN wanted people to know that potatoes are not only very good for you but also easy to grow.

Of course, people in some parts of the world have been eating potatoes for a long time. In fact, the first potatoes were grown more than 8,000 years ago by the Inca people of Peru. Later, in the 16th century, potatoes were taken to Europe, and they quickly became a common European food. Europeans still eat more potatoes than anyone else. However, people in Asia and Africa now eat twice as many potatoes as they did 40 years ago.

The reason why the UN decided to have a special year for potatoes is that they have many advantages over other foods that people grow. Potatoes need very little water and can grow in as few as 50 days. Moreover, they do not need much land to grow. They also grow well in both hot and cold countries. Recently, there has been a shortage of many foods, such as wheat and rice. One reason for this is that the world's population is increasing. The UN says that in order to feed everyone in the future, we need to grow more potatoes.

Many people agree with this idea. China, which is already the largest producer of potatoes in the world, plans to grow even more of the crop in the future. Also, India is trying to develop a new kind of fast-growing potato. In the future, it seems likely that the potato will be an important vegetable that people all over the world eat every day.

(42) Why did the United Nations create the International Year of the Potato?

- 1 To look for strange new vegetables.
- 2 To teach people different ways to cook potatoes.
- 3 To tell people about the advantages of potatoes.
- 4 To hold a special food festival for farmers.

(43) What has changed over the past 40 years?

- 1 Farms around the world can now grow bigger potatoes.
- 2 People in Asia and Africa now eat more potatoes than before.
- 3 New kinds of potatoes have been discovered in South America.
- 4 Europeans have started buying potatoes from Peru.

(44) What is one advantage of potatoes?

- 1 They can be sent to other countries quickly.
- 2 They can be left in the fields for a long time.
- 3 They can be planted together with other crops.
- 4 They can be grown without much water.

(45) In the future,

- 1 people everywhere are likely to eat potatoes regularly.
- 2 India will buy most of its potatoes from other countries.
- 3 the UN could start selling potatoes all around the world.
- 4 China will develop new fast-growing potatoes.
