The Swimming Test

Steven went to a high school in a town near the ocean. His school had a special rule that all students had to pass a swimming test to graduate. The distance was only 100 meters, but Steven was a terrible swimmer. He had to spend many hours every week (34). He failed the test twice, and he became tired of spending so much time in the pool. Finally, he was able to pass on his third try.

Ten years after graduating, Steven saw a story about his old school in the newspaper. Some students were complaining about the swimming test. The students said they did not need to learn to swim. But Steven did not (35). He thought being able to swim was useful, and learning to swim taught him a lot about working hard. He decided to write a letter to his old school asking them to keep the test.

Toys for Pigs

In recent years, scientists have been learning more about the abilities of animals. One animal that is (36) than many people realize is the pig. Research has shown that pigs have good memories and can learn to do many things. But because pigs are so intelligent, they easily get bored. This can be a problem for pig farmers. Often, large numbers of pigs are kept inside buildings with little space to move around. In such conditions, pigs can become bored and unhappy. To stop this from happening, many farmers give their pigs toys to play with.

One toy for pigs was created by a scientist named Uwe Richter from the University of Kassel in Germany. His toy has three colorful plastic balls on a metal spring. The balls jump around when the pigs push them with their noses. Richter says he (37) the toy after seeing children playing with plastic balls in a playroom.

However, some people think that toys are not the best way to solve the problem. They say that it would be better to keep pigs in more (38) conditions. Pigs like to search through plants and dirt to find food. Richter himself points out that pigs are not interested in his toy when they are free to move around outside. They only play with it when there is nothing more interesting to do. His work—and that of other scientists—shows us how important it is to treat pigs and other animals well.

From: Claire Redford <jazzyclaire@intermail.net>
 To: Raymond West <raywest35@quicklink.net>
 Date: October 14, 2012
 Subject: New musician in town

Dear Mr. West,

I was given your e-mail address by one of the members of your band—my friend Jeff Foley. He said that your trumpet player will leave your band soon, so you are looking for someone new. I moved to New Jersey from Florida last month and have been trying to find people to play music with. Jeff recommended that I write to you about my interest in your band.

I have been a musician for many years. I originally played classical guitar, but when I was living in Florida, I became interested in jazz. I began to take trumpet lessons and started playing the trumpet in a jazz band there. We mostly played Latin jazz and had concerts almost every week at a local club. I know your band plays Chicago-style jazz, and I would love to try playing that style.

I heard from Jeff that you are going to be playing in a free jazz concert at the Seaside Music Hall this Saturday. He suggested that I come to see you and bring my trumpet. I was wondering if we could talk after the show, and maybe I could play a little for you.

Regards,
 Claire Redford

- 4 She played guitar in a Latin-jazz band.

(41) Claire Redford says that on Saturday she would like to

- 4 buy tickets at the Seaside Music Hall.

The Soap Project

Derreck Kayongo is a businessman from the African country of Uganda who moved to the United States in the early 1990s. When he first arrived, he stayed at a hotel in Philadelphia. He noticed that the hotel staff put a new bar of soap in his room every morning even if he had only used the old bar once. The hotel gave each guest a new bar of soap every day and threw away the used bars. Kayongo was surprised to learn that many other hotels in the United States did the same thing.

He thought that it would be better to collect the used soap and give it to poor people in developing countries. Each year, many children in developing countries die from diseases caused by bacteria. People can easily prevent such diseases by washing their hands with soap. Kayongo points out that soap is sold in the places where these children live. The problem, however, is that many families cannot buy it because they have to spend their money on food and other important things like medicine.

In May 2009, many years after his experience at the hotel, Kayongo created an organization called the Global Soap Project. Hotels that take part in the project collect used bars of soap and send them to the organization. Volunteers separate the soap into different types. They are careful to put bars with the same color and smell together. The soap is then heated and made into new bars. Finally, the organization asks other charities to take the new soap to developing countries and hand it out to people who need it.

So far, over 600 hotels have joined the Global Soap Project. Recycling the soap costs the hotels a little money, and it is hard work for the volunteers. But Kayongo and the volunteers think that the work of the organization is important not only because it helps to prevent diseases, but also because it reduces waste from hotels.

- (42) In the early 1990s, Derreck Kayongo found out that
- 1 guests usually took soap home from hotels.
 - 2 staff at hotels had to buy soap for themselves.
 - 3 the soap given to hotel guests was often quite old.
 - 4 hotels in the United States threw away a lot of soap.

- (43) Kayongo says that in developing countries,
- 1 many families make their own soap at home.
 - 2 many families do not have enough money to buy soap.
 - 3 soap is not sold in places where poor people live.
 - 4 soap is too weak to prevent many diseases.

- (44) What does the Global Soap Project ask other charities to do?
- 1 Hand out its soap to people in need.
 - 2 Collect used bars of soap from hotels.
 - 3 Make new bars of soap from used ones.
 - 4 Check to make sure that its soap smells nice.

- (45) What is one reason that Kayongo thinks his organization's work is important?
- 1 It teaches people to wash using less soap.
 - 2 It allows volunteers to get free bars of soap.
 - 3 It helps to stop diseases in developing countries.
 - 4 It shows hotels how they can make extra money.
