Oh, Christmas Tree

An evergreen tree is a tree that has green leaves all year round. Evergreen trees are famous for being used as Christmas trees. Although we often see Christmas trees in houses and stores in December, not many people know their history. When people see ordinary trees without leaves in the winter, they often feel sad because the trees and other plants seem dead. Evergreen trees, though, always look (36). So, for thousands of years, people have decorated their homes with a piece of an evergreen tree in winter. Seeing the tree helped them remember that winter would end and all the plants would become green again.

In the 16th century, Germans started to bring whole trees into their homes at Christmastime. (37), they just decorated the tree with candles. Later, they began to add other things, such as stars, fruit, and colored paper. Then, when German people moved to countries such as the United States in the 19th century, they took the tradition of the Christmas tree with them. Now, it has become an important part of Christmas around the world.

Because Christmas trees are very popular, thousands of evergreen trees are cut down every year to decorate people's homes. Some people are worried because this causes damage to the environment. Bill Ulfelder, the director of the Nature Conservancy's New York program, says that to solve this problem, each family should (38) a new tree every year. That way, everyone can enjoy the Christmas-tree tradition and, at the same time, be kind to the environment.

From: Marcella Adams <madams@simplemail.com>
 To: Russell Plumb <r-plumb@homemail.com>
 Date: January 24, 2016
 Subject: Safe Town

Hello Russell,

How are you? I didn't see you in class last week, and your sister told me that you had a cold. Are you feeling better now? Mr. Carlson taught us some new things in math class, and they're really hard. I took lots of notes, so I'll let you borrow them.

Anyway, I wanted to talk to you about an event called Safe Town. The Graysville Fire Department is going to have special classes for young kids for one week in March. In it, people from town will teach the kids about road and bicycle safety. Someone came to our high school on Wednesday and talked about it. They're looking for people to teach the classes, and I'm really interested in it. I thought you might be, too.

They need people to help teach the safety lessons to kids ages 4 to 7. In order to join, our parents need to sign a special paper. We won't get paid for it, but our homeroom teacher says that it will be a good experience. Also, doing these kinds of activities can help you get into a good college. Let me know what you think!

See you,
 Marcella

Real Croissants

Croissants are a popular French food. In France, many people eat them for breakfast with coffee, while other people use them to make sandwiches. Around the world, people think that croissants are an important part of French culture and tradition. However, surprisingly, they were introduced into France only about 150 years ago.

Nobody knows exactly where and when croissants began to be baked, but people do know that croissants came to France from Austria. In 1839, an Austrian man named August Zang started a bakery in Paris. His bakery sold many baked goods from Austria. The most popular was what is now called the croissant. Seeing the popularity of Zang's croissants, many other French bakeries began to make and sell them, too.

Even now, croissants are one of the most popular items in French bakeries, but they are difficult and expensive to make. As a result, some bakeries have started to buy frozen croissants, bake them, and sell them in their shops. This is a good idea for bakeries that want to spend less time and money making croissants, but it makes some traditional French bakers angry.

The reason is that they think that those bakeries are breaking the government's rules about bread. The French government says that a bakery must make all of its bread by hand inside the bakery. Based on this rule, bakeries should not be allowed to sell frozen croissants made in factories. However, according to the government, croissants are not actually a bread, but a pastry like pies and tarts. Because of this, they do not have to be made in the bakery that sells them. Whether they are pastries or not, they are still a popular food.

Although croissants are a popular French food,

- 1 they do not taste good when eaten with coffee.
- 2 they were not first made in France.
- 3 people around the world think that they are not French.
- 4 people from France do not want other people to eat them.

(43)

An Austrian man named August Zang

- 1 tried to discover the history of French foods.
- 2 sold many French foods at his bakery in Austria.
- 3 thought that croissants would not be a popular food.
- 4 began to sell croissants at his bakery in Paris.

(44)

Why have some bakeries started to use frozen croissants?

- 1 They think that frozen croissants are more delicious.
- 2 They think that customers want to buy frozen croissants.
- 3 They want to save time and money when making croissants.
- 4 They want to sell their croissants to traditional bakeries.

(45)

Why can bakeries sell frozen croissants?

- 1 The rules for croissants and the rules for bread are different.
- 2 The factories where they are made are cleaner than bakeries.
- 3 French people got angry when bakeries stopped selling them.
- 4 French bakers think that frozen croissants are safer and healthier.
